REDS BACK DOWN ON TRUCE DEMAND

McGRATH FACES QUESTIONING

Supreme Court Justice To Be Tax Probe Witness

WASHINGTON, Dec. 3—Chairman King, (D) Calif., said today that House tax scandal probes will call both Supreme Court Justice Clark and Attorney General McGrath as witnesses.

King said they will be invited to give their reaction to testimony of T. Lamar Caudle, ousted by President Truman as the Justice Department's top tax fraud prosecutor.

The chairman said he hopes to get to Clark and McGrath this week. He told newsmen that he thinks Clark would "want to clear the record about the plane trip."

This was a reference to trips Clark took with Caudle in the private plane of Troy Whitehead, Charlotte, N. C., manufacturer who was under tax investigation.

KING SAID it is likely Clark also will be asked to explain his action in bringing Caudle into the Justice Department. Clark was attorney general at the time.

The disclosure that Clark and McGrath will be called came after Sen. Williams, (R) Del., said he has evidence of tax "blackmail" in New York and predicted the probe soon will move to the "Washington level."

Williams, who touched off the tax scandal investigation, made the new charge as King's House committee recalled Caudle for more questioning about his activities in connection with tax cases.

KING HIT BACK at demands of Republican committeemen for perjury summoning of McGrath. He said, "the demands were unnecessary."

Reds Tell How, Why Their Planes Force Down American Cargo Ship

MOSCOW, Dec. 3—The Russians have reported that a U. S. Air Force transport plane, missing in the Balkans since Nov. 19 with four crewmen aboard, was forced to land in Hungary by Soviet fighter planes.

The Russian account, in the official news agency Tass, alleged the American C-47—on a flight from Erding, Germany, to Belgrade—had been dispatched to carry spies and saboteurs from Yugoslavia into the Soviet Union and her East European allies.

It added that the four U. S. crewmen had been turned over to Hungarian authorities.

Tass gave this account of the "downing of the C-47:

$92,500 Issued By Local Banks' Christmas Clubs

This Christmas in Circleville should be merry if money can make it so.

Three Circleville banks recently issued checks for a total of about $92,500 to 1,600 subscribers to their annual Christmas Club savings programs.

This means that Circleville merchants can expect a good business here this Yuletide season, since most of the persons who receive the Christmas Club checks use them to purchase gifts.

However, a percentage of that money goes right back into the three banks—by persons who are beginning their 1952 savings accounts. All three banks already have opened their 1952 Christmas Club programs.

Circleville Savings and Banking Co. has issued checks totalling about $53,244 to approximately 950 subscribers.

Second National Bank has issued checks for about $15,200 to 255 account holders.

And Third National Bank has issued checks totalling about $24,105 to about 400 persons.

This year's combined total is the largest in the local history of Christmas Club accounts. Last year's figure was $90,000, while the 1949 total was $80,600.

Super Liner Set

BURBANK, Calif., Dec. 3—The four-engine, 88-passenger Super Constellation will go into service on Eastern Air Lines late this month. EAL has ordered 30 of the planes.

Bethlehem Readies Yule Ceremonies

BETHLEHEM, Pa., Dec. 3—The "little" town of Bethlehem (Pa.) is setting the stage today for its world-renowned Christmas pageantry with a bittersweet theme of "Praise the Lord and Pass the Ammunition."

While the townfolk prepare their colorful settings and rites to rededicate themselves to peace on earth, Bethlehem's giant steel mills and foundries are turning out metal for weapons to repel the breeders of ill-will toward men.

The smoke from the factory stacks will reflect the rays of a giant electrical star visible for some 20 miles over the Lehigh Valley where nestles the bustling community which was christened a Christmas Eve by its founders more than two centuries ago.

Time has changed the once tiny settlement founded by a group of Moravians fleeing European religious persecution so that it is now a thriving industrial city of 70,000 persons.

But the heritage of the forebears remains the same. The centuries-old traditions of Christmas Eve vigils and rededications to the Prince of Peace have remained constant.

They have been embellished by a mammoth lighting display which entwines the entire community like wrapping on a Christmas package and annually attracts thousands of pilgrims and sight-seers.

Towering Christmas trees blossom with thousands of multi-colored lights. Stars and bells sparkle above the streets with more than 40 city blocks and two bridges outlined by 30,000 lights twisted around laurel.

But Christmas, to the residents, means much more than just lighting up the town. And they refuse to permit the stigma of commercialism to mar the occasion. The merchants who pay for the lighting do not capitalize upon the purely religious observation.

Heart of the commemoration is the Christmas Eve vigil held each year in the ancient Moravian church. Each person holds a lighted candle while softly-sung carols and the fragrance of evergreen fill the church. The candles symbolize the coming of light into the world.

U.S. Mobilization 'On Schedule' At $1 Billion A Month, Chief Says

KEY WEST, Dec. 3—President Truman Monday studied a personal report from Defense Mobilization Director Charles E. Wilson that military production is "on schedule" and is increasing at a rate of $1 billion a month.

The defense mobilization chief spent a busy weekend in a series of conferences with Mr. Truman, presenting a highly detailed report on the military production picture and the nation's state of readiness to meet any emergency.

Before leaving by plane to return to Washington, Wilson refuted the charges of a congressional subcommittee that the nation's defense production "is lagging dangerously behind schedule."

Wilson insisted production "is right up on my schedules." He stressed that civilian production has not interfered with military production, as critics in Congress have charged. He asserted:

1. MILITARY production is increasing at the rate of $1 billion a month. It is up 300 per cent over a year ago.

2. Civilian production has not interfered with military production and has not robbed defense needs of critically needed metals and other essential materials.

3. The "pinch" in civilian production will begin to be felt during 1952 when the weapons production job switches from design and tooling to a tremendous production rate in all types of arms.

4. Some "organizational changes" in the defense mobilization setup, including possible appointment of a production "czar" in the defense department, are under consideration and will take place soon, but no final decisions have yet been made.

5. Production schedules are being met "as expected," and the "speedup" on production rate will be reached "just about as expected."

Texas Churchmen Observe Sabbath With Small Riot

FORT WORTH, Dec. 3—Dozens of churchgoers were carted off to the police station Sunday when a riot over ouster of the pastor broke out in the street in front of the Ross Avenue Baptist church.

Several church members swapped blows.

Not content, the Texas churchgoers broke into heated argument at the police station. Police Lt. Wilford Matlock threatened to place all of them in jail.

Matters quieted and all were released. Officers said that technically none of the Baptists had been placed under arrest.

Six policemen were required to stop the riot.

The trouble began when church members voted to oust the Rev. W. W. Baker as pastor. Baptist congregations, under church practice, elect and oust ministers by congregational vote.

When Rev. Mr. Baker arrived Sunday, several persons refused to allow him to enter the church. That started the fight.

6 B-36s Make Long Flight

FORT WORTH, Dec. 3—A flight of six B-36 bombers landed Sunday at an American Air Force base in North Africa after a 5,000-mile non-stop flight from Fort Worth's Carswell Air Force Base.

Eighth Air Force headquarters said the flight was a training mission.

Engine Whips Up Mammoth Omelet

BARBERTON, Dec. 3—Scrambled eggs—12,000 of them—were the order of the day here Monday after a Baltimore & Ohio freight train demolished a truck-trailer bearing eggs from Maryland.

Police said Driver Clarence S. Horner, 31, started to cross the tracks when the giant "egg-beater" came bearing down on the trailer. Horner and his helper, Ralph Palmer, escaped injury.

County Budget Hearings Due To Start Tuesday

Pickaway County's budget commission will meet Tuesday in Pickaway Courthouse for its annual hearings.

First on the slate for the budget commissioners will be Circleville Township, slated to make its money requests at 9 a. m. Tuesday. Included in the Circleville Township group will be trustees, board of education, Circleville board of education and Circleville city council.

At one-hour intervals during the remainder of Tuesday, Wednesday and Thursday, officials of the other Pickaway County townships will meet with the commission.

Officials will include village councils and boards of education, along with township trustees and boards of education.

Members of the budget commission are County Auditor Fred Tipton; County Treasurer Robert Colville; and County Prosecutor Guy Cline. The commission oversees the budget requests and sets tax rates for each district of the county.

Hunter's Arrow Hits A 'Calf'

ARMONK, N. Y., Dec. 3—Bernard Kirman went hunting for deer Sunday and got a calf—his friend's.

Kirman and Tommy Mohar set out with bows and arrows and separated to stalk their game. Kirman heard a rustle in a thicket, loosed an arrow and it pierced Mahar's leg.

Senate Election Spending Ruling Said Unrealistic, To Be Changed

WASHINGTON, Dec. 3—Senator Monroney (D-Okla.) said Monday the present legal limitations on spending in senatorial elections are "meaningless" because of numerous loopholes.

Monroney told reporters the Senate elections subcommittee on which he serves is going to try to write a realistic and enforceable limit on such spending. He said, however, it was "an exceedingly tough job."

The subcommittee tentatively finished Saturday its open hearings on the Ohio senatorial election in which both sides charged that huge sums were spent.

Monroney, who was acting chairman when the sessions ended, said there was a chance they would be reopened later—especially if Cyrus S. Eaton Sr. and Mr. of Cleveland could be subpoenaed.

THE SENATE group heard testimony Saturday that the senior Eaton, well known financier, his son and seven former employees of Otis and Co. contributed $35,000 to one of the labor groups to defeat Sen. Robert Taft in the Ohio campaign last year.

The Federal Corrupt Practices Act forbids individual contributions of more than $5,000 to be used in behalf of a federal candidate.

However, Subcommittee Counsel John Moore said this did not apply to gifts made to state or local organizations and he indicated he felt the Eaton gifts probably came in that category.

Monroney said the present le-

Male Cinderella Lands In Jail

NEW YORK, Dec. 3—In the fairy tale, Cinderella got a prince when the shoe fit her foot.

All Freddie Holmes got was a cell.

Frank Avellina found a burglar in his apartment and seized his foot as he went out the window, leaving one shoe in Avellina's hand.

A short time later police found Holmes in a nearby alley, missing a shoe. They tried on the shoe found in the apartment and it fit. Holmes was jailed pending a hearing Friday.

gal limit on senatorial spending was entirely unrealistic.

The limit is three cents for each voter who voted in the preceding general election, with a maximum ceiling of $25,000 and a minimum ceiling—in small states—of $10,000. Under the provision, Taft filed personal expenditures of about $1,800 and Ferguson about $2,200.

But the Ohio senator agreed that perhaps as much as $700,000 was spent in his behalf and Ferguson said the campaign for him cost more than $100,000.

Taft estimated the labor groups and others backing Ferguson actually spent at least $2 million. Ferguson said his estimate of the spending for Taft was $5 million.

2 Canadian Nuns Given Jail Terms At Commie Trial

HONG KONG, Dec. 3—Two Canadian nuns were sent to prison for five years and three others were ordered expelled from China after a clamorous, broadcast trial Sunday in Canton.

The nuns, who helped run the Sacred Heart Orphanage in Canton, were sentenced at the close of the trial before 6,000 shouting Chinese in Sun Yat Sen Square. The shouts of the spectators could be heard plainly here by radio listeners.

Prison terms were given Sister Superior Antoninette Couvrette, 38, and Sister Jeanne Gravel, 43, both of Quebec.

Banished from China for life were Sisters Imelda Lapiere of Quebec; Jermaine Tanguay, a Canadian citizen born in Nashua, N.H., and Elizabeth Lemire, also of Quebec.

The five nuns for years ran the orphanage for abandoned children and unwanted girls. Most of the youngsters were starving and ill when brought to the sisters. Many were dying. The nuns saved hundreds, but thousands died and the Communists accused the sisters of murder for each death. The nuns apparently were given no opportunity to defend themselves.

Maybe U.S. Kids Getting Too Many Food Calories

NEW YORK, Dec. 3—The scientific journal Nutrition Reviews has raised the surprising question whether the high calorie diets of American school children may shorten their lives.

The review says the only experiments ever made on calories and length of life raise this question, even though they were done on rats.

The experiments were by Dr. C. M. McKay of Cornell university and they have been confirmed many times in the last 20 years. The Review observed:

"To what extent the rat observations apply to humans remains uncertain, but they raise the question whether current emphasis on high caloric intake by school children is well advised."

The review proposes human studies on persons whom the world wars forced to live during youth on calories considered insufficient by present American standards.

4 Bucks Help Woman Get Doe

NEW CITY, N.Y., Dec. 3—William Margraff got herself a doe yesterday because of the ardor of four bucks.

The doe, chased by the bucks, leaped from a roadside bank onto the hood of Mrs. Margraff's car. The animal broke two of its legs and was shot by a state trooper.

Foe Seeks 'Neutral' Inspection

Troop 'Freeze' Also Requested

MUNSAN, Dec. 4—(Tuesday)—Communist delegates to the Korea truce conference backed down sharply Monday on earlier demands and called for a complete "freeze" of troops and armament during a proposed armistice.

The Red delegation proposed also that trained men from "neutral" countries be given the job of supervising the armistice.

All negotiators after a brief recess in the Panmunjom meeting presented the Reds with 21 questions designed to clarify the surprise Communist offer.

Included among the questions was one asking what nations the Reds consider "neutral."

The Communist proposal limited inspection to "ports of entry" whereas the Allies are demanding that all parts of North and South Korea be open to observers in order to insure compliance with a armistice.

THE ALLIED negotiators proposed that a subcommittee be named to consider the new Red offer, but this was not acted upon and another plenary session of the full truce committee was scheduled for 11 a. m. Tuesday (9 p. m. Monday EST).

In earlier discussions, the Communists had rejected Allied demands for full armistice inspection and also had sought the right to build up their airfields during an armistice. The airfield matter was not mentioned in the new Red offer.

"The Red proposal could mean solution of the number three item on the truce conference agenda—policing of the armistice."

An Allied spokesman pointed out that the Red proposal would mean that the UN rotation program would be blocked. In other words, there would be absolutely no changes in personnel or number of troops in Korea after the time the armistice is declared.

The new Red offer was made at the afternoon session Monday following a morning meeting during which the Allies charged the Communists with plotting to build up their "offensive capabilities" during the proposed armistice.

Vice Adm. Charles Turner Joy, chief Allied truce delegate, made the accusation and called for complete inspection of all forces.

The Red proposal for "freezing" troops was made after Admiral Joy put the question of solving the dispute squarely up to the Communists. He asked them if the Monday morning session how they thought the deadlock in the discussions could be broken.

JOY TOLD the Communists that the basic condition for any armistice which the Allies might sign would be that the agreement would make it impossible for either side to use the armistice period to gain a military advantage. Joy asserted:

"The United Nations command will not violate any armistice agreement to which it is signatory. Therefore, we do not fear but welcome joint observation within our territory. You hesitate to agree to joint observation. Why? What do you plan to hide?"

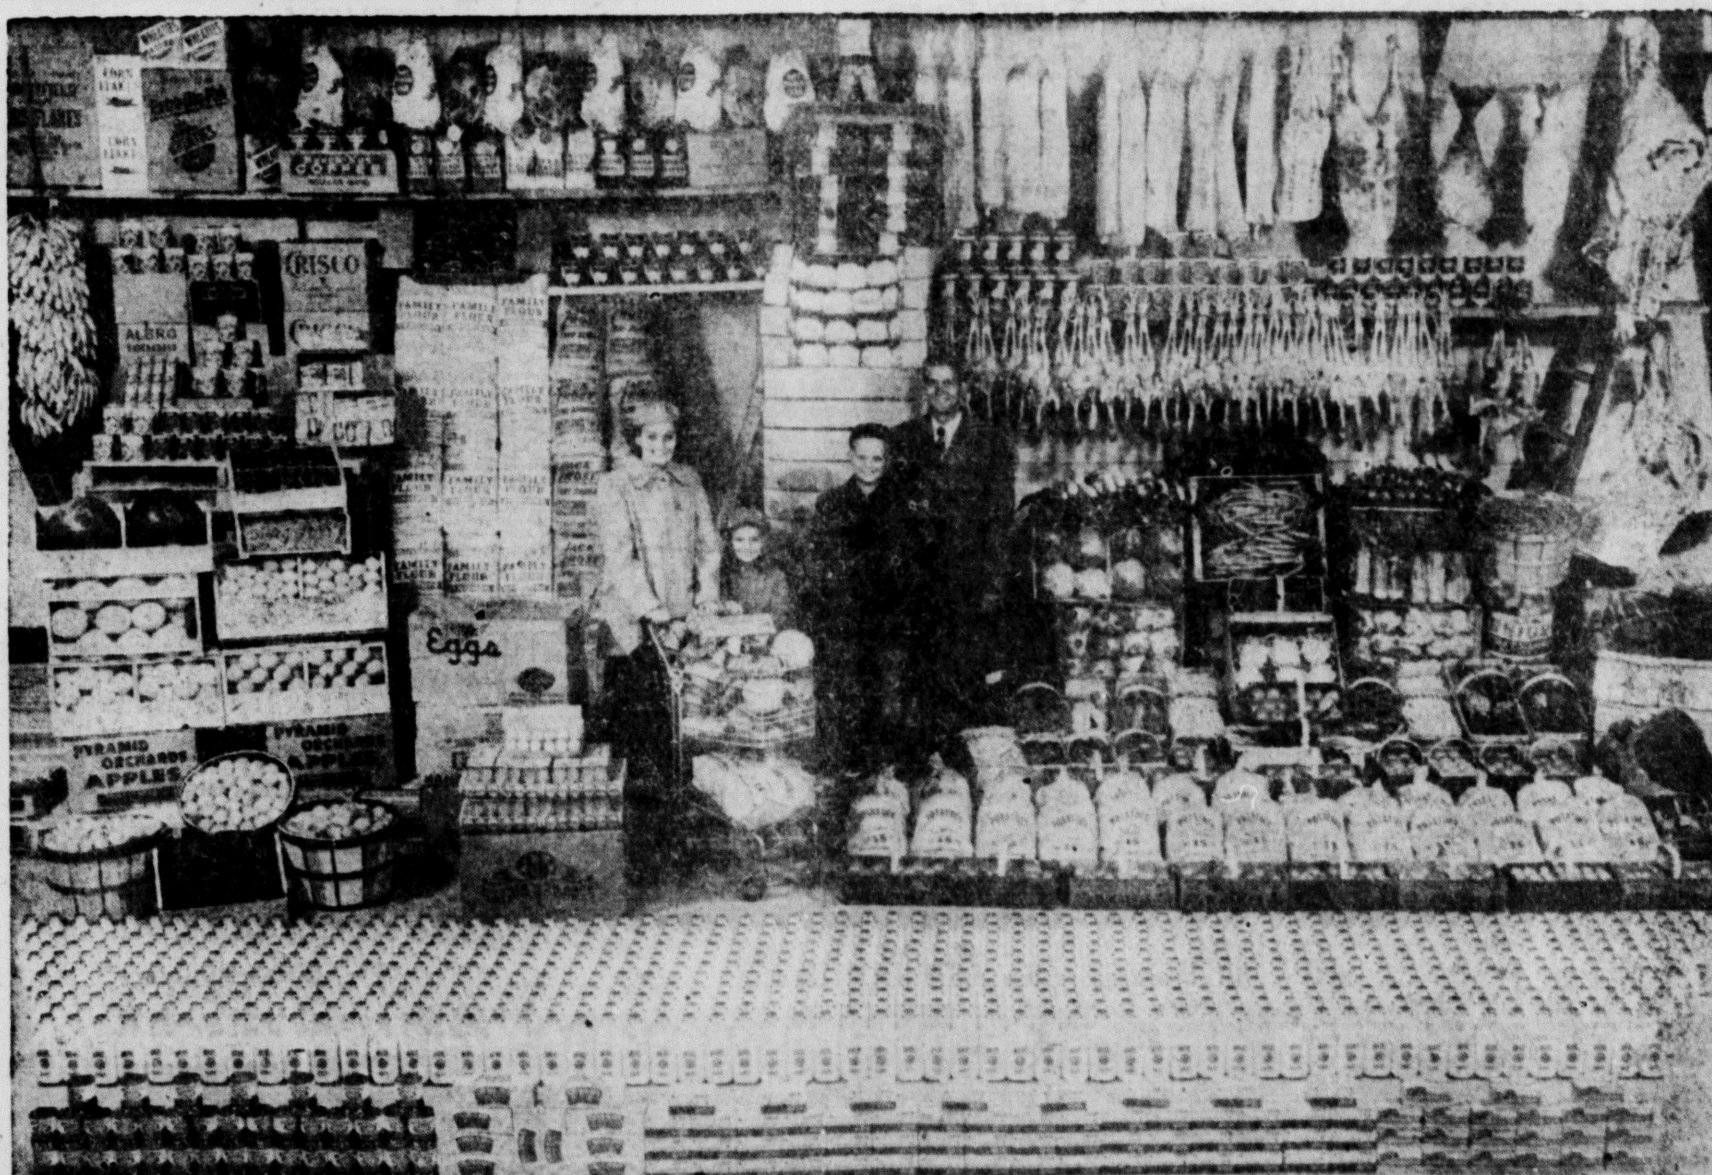

Kenyon College President Lashes OSU's Gag Rule

CLEVELAND, Dec. 3—Dr. Gordon Keith Chalmers, president of Kenyon college, has added his voice to the opposition to Ohio State university's speech-control rule.

The college head, speaking here Sunday, said "the most alarming thing about the rule, is the assumption that students in a university are expected to believe everything they are told."

Dr. Chalmers asserted that that belief "is contrary to the whole idea, purpose and history of a university, which, instead, is designed to lead all its students to weigh and judge everything they are told."

He added that the only conclusion one can draw from comments on the "gag rule" is that many Ohioans "do not want a university at all, but something less than a university."

AVERAGE AMERICAN FAMILY of four will eat this mountain (about two and a half tons) of food in a year. Steve Czekalinski of Cleveland poses with his family and its annual bill of fare based on official figures of U. S. Department of Agriculture. Set up in a Cleveland warehouse, some of the quantities are 578 pounds of meat, 127 pounds of poultry, 45 pounds of fish, 698 quarts of milk, 167 pounds of butter, lard or vegetable fats, 440 pounds of fresh fruit, 151 pounds of canned and frozen fruits and juices, 1,012 pounds of fresh vegetables, 416 pounds of potatoes, 179 pounds of frozen and canned vegetables, 390 pounds sugar, 544 pounds flour and 46 pounds cereals.

Caudle has testified that McGrath approved his accepting a $5,000 commission on the sale of a plane to the "investigator" for persons in tax difficulties.

Testimony thus far has shown that Caudle bought three cars at a discount from a man in tax difficulties, accepted a $5,000 fee on the sale of a plane to an "investigator" for persons charged with tax fraud and enjoyed free plane rides from a man who later asked his official help.

Reds Tell How, Why Their Planes Force Down American Cargo Ship

MOSCOW, Dec. 3—The Russians have reported that a U.S. Air Force transport plane, missing in the Balkans since Nov. 19 with four crewmen aboard, was forced to land in Hungary by Soviet fighter planes.

The Russian account, in the official news agency Tass, alleged the American C-47—on a flight from Erding, Germany, to Belgrade—had been dispatched to carry spies and saboteurs from Yugoslavia into the Soviet Union and her East European allies.

It added that the four U.S. crewmen had been turned over to Hungarian authorities.

Tass gave this account of the downing of the C-47:

The plane "violated the Romanian state frontier in the vicinity of Recita and then, after flying over the territory of Romania, violated Hungarian territory in the area of the town of Gyula and tried to fly over Hungarian territory."

SOVIET AIR force fighters, "stationed in Hungary on the strength of the Hungarian peace treaty," forced the plane down near the Hungarian town of Papa.

The Tass report said:

1. A portable radio on board the plane was "set in soft packing and with a device for dropping it down with a parachute and designed for use not on board the plane but in field conditions."

2. Six parachutes aboard the plane were, "as shown by their place and number, 'x x x' meant to be used by members of the crew but for some other purposes."

3. Several packs found aboard contained "twenty warm blankets ready to be dropped down from the plane."

4. It was "completely obvious the above named objects were not necessary to a plane carrying out a normal flight. Their presence becomes understandable if the plane was carrying out a flight with criminal intent, for purposes of dropping spies and diversionists of the American intelligence service and for supplying them."

The Air Force in Washington has listed the crewmen as Capt. John J. Swift, Glen Falls, N.Y.; Capt. Dave H. Henderson, Shawnee, Okla.; Sgt. James A. Elam, Kingsland, Ark.; and Tech. Sgt. Jess A. Duff, Spokane, Wash.

80 Hungarians Reported Hanged

LONDON, Dec. 3—The London Daily Mail published a Stockholm dispatch today claiming that 80 Hungarian army and air force officers have been hanged in Budapest because of mutiny.

Reds Lose Again On Italy Issue

PARIS, Dec. 3—The United Nations Trusteeship Committee has voted 38 to 5 in favor of a report urging the General Assembly to recommend "urgent (Security Council) consideration" of Italy's bid for UN membership.

$92,500 Issued By Local Banks' Christmas Clubs

This Christmas in Circleville should be merry if money can make it so.

Three Circleville banks recently issued checks for a total of about $92,500 to 1,600 subscribers to their annual Christmas Club savings programs.

This means that Circleville merchants can expect a good business here this Yuletide season, since most of the persons who receive the Christmas Club checks use them to purchase gifts.

However, a percentage of that money goes right back into the three banks—by persons who are beginning their 1952 savings accounts. All three banks already have opened their 1952 Christmas Club programs.

Circleville Savings and Banking Co. has issued checks totalling about $53,244 to approximately 950 subscribers.

Second National Bank has issued checks for about $15,200 to 255 account holders.

And Third National Bank has issued checks totalling about $24,105 to about 400 persons.

This year's combined total is the largest in the local history of Christmas Club accounts. Last year's figure was $90,000, while the 1949 total was $80,600.

Only 531 Yankee Gamblers Pay For U.S. Stamps

WASHINGTON, Dec. 3.—Most of the nation's bookies and numbers men were absent when the deadline came for them to brand themselves as professional gamblers by plunking down $50 for a new federal tax stamp.

A nationwide survey just before the closing date showed 1,171 applications had been filed, with 531 stamps actually issued.

The tax stamp was only part of a one-two punch tossed at professional gamblers by the $5.7 billion revenue measure recently passed by Congress. The act also requires them to turn over to the treasury 10 per cent of all the bets they handle.

The lack of takers for the stamp indicated either that bookmakers and their ilk have shut up shop or decided to pull down the shade a little farther on their operations.

If they continue to carry on without a federal stamp, they risk being hauled in by revenue agents. But if they display the required stamp, they make it easier for local police to nab them for violating state laws against gambling.

The tax stamp was only part of a one-two punch tossed at professional gamblers by the $5.7 billion revenue measure recently passed by Congress. The act also requires them to turn over to the treasury 10 per cent of all the bets they handle.

The lack of takers for the stamp indicated either that bookmakers and their ilk have shut up shop or decided to pull down the shade a little farther on their operations.

If they continue to carry on without a federal stamp, they risk being hauled in by revenue agents. But if they display the required stamp, they make it easier for local police to nab them for violating state laws against gambling.

Dayton Setting Up Clinic To Cure Child Insanity

DAYTON, Dec. 3—Variety Manor, an institution dedicated to rescuing children from the brink of insanity, will start to receive patients in about a week.

Variety Manor is two things. It is a hospital for children who are emotionally disturbed. It also is a clinic for children who are showing undesirable personality trends, but whose condition permits treatment after school and on weekends.

The department which will hospitalize the seriously disturbed children is the recently dedicated Dayton Receiving Hospital for Children. Variety Manor, so far as is known, has no counterpart in the nation. Ohio is the first in the field, although 22 other states are considering legislation to set up such centers.

The manor, located in a gray stone house which once was one of Dayton's finest, will be different from other child-treatment centers in its approach to emotional disturbance.

FOR ITS STAFF will devote almost as much effort to the retraining of parents as it does to the reorientation of the disturbed child.

Advances Made In Treatment Of Heart Disorder

YOUNGSTOWN, Dec. 3—What success are doctors having in treating high blood pressure victims?

Dr. G. E. Wakerlin, head of the department of physiology of the University of Illinois college of medicine, gave the answer at a meeting that opened the Youngstown Area Heart Association advance gift drive.

Important advances have been made in recent years in treating high blood pressure, Dr. Wakerlin said, but the cause is incompletely known in 95 per cent of the cases. A kidney inflammation or infection or an adrenal gland tumor generally is responsible in the other cases.

"Certain new drugs are being tested in treatment," Dr. Wakerlin said. "The low salt diet produces what in effect is a cure in about 10 per cent of patients treated. Likewise, a sympathetic nerve cutting operation effects what is tantamount to a cure in about 10 per cent of patients, and appears to improve the general condition and prolongs the life span of others."

He was quick to say that many people with high blood pressure live out their normal life span and die of old age.

"Obviously we need much more research to determine more definitely the causes," he added. "In this field results come slowly, but I predict that within even the present decade we will have developed more successful ways of preventing and treating this form of heart disease."

All forms of heart disease, of which high blood pressure is one, kill 700,000 Americans annually. Cancer is the second greatest killer, with one-third as many victims, he said.

ing of parents as it does to the reorientation of the disturbed child.

Its goal, as well as the obvious one of keeping the child from slipping over the line into a psychopathic state, will be to teach parents how to handle their own children, how to prevent a recurrence of emotional imbalance after young patients return to their homes.

Ohio has another hospital for children—a department of Longview state hospital in Cincinnati—which is treating children on the theory that true insanity in children is possible.

Some psychiatric experts disagree with the theory, but rather than miss any bets, the state division of mental hygiene is working on that theory anyway.

Variety Manor's hospital and out-patient clinic will treat disturbed children in the 7-to-11 age bracket. These children will not be the mentally ill, says Dr. Clyde B. Simson, director of the center.

Rather, he says, emphasis will be on those children who have not been able to adjust themselves to their home environment or on those who come from the so-called "broken" homes. In the latter group, absence of either parent has tended to build up undesirable traits and personality trends.

Only 10 of the beds in the 25-bed hospital will be available for use of patients from outside Montgomery County. Only what the officials call the more serious cases of maladjustment will receive the individualized hospital treatment.

The out-patient clinic, which now cares for some 60 cases each month, has been operating several years as a Community Chest agency. It will continue, as part of the manor, to treat less serious cases.

New Indiana Narcotics Law Now In Effect

INDIANAPOLIS, Dec. 3 — Indiana's new narcotics law, one of the stiffest in the nation, is in effect.

The recent special session of the Indiana General Assembly enacted the new statute.

The new law provides for jail sentences of not less than two years nor more than five for the first offense, not less than five years nor more than 10 for the second offense, and not less than 10 years nor more than 20 for the third offense.

Accompanying fines are $1,000 for the first offense, $5,000 for the second offense, and $10,000 for the third and all subsequent offenses.

The sentence and fine may be suspended on the first offense, but both are mandatory for the second, third and all subsequent offenses.

The bill passed both the house and the senate on unanimous votes.

National Tube Faces Shutdown

LORAIN, Dec. 3—A walkout by 40 coke plant employees may cause the National Tube Co. to shut down its entire Lorain works.

Santa is already on the job. Letters from high school boys ask the big annual question . . . "What shall I give HER for Christmas?"

It's a good question, because you, boys, are the ones to do the first gift-giving when Christmas comes. For a girl you date only occasionally, a friendly card is the correct way to sent holiday wishes. If she's the girl you like best and you want to give her a small but nice gift, it should be rather impersonal . . . something to use or to read, because things to wear are not considered good taste.

If you two "go steady," your gift can be a little more personal, but it shouldn't be expensive. Most jewelry and clothes are not correct boy-and-girl gifts, so steer clear of them. After all, it's the fact that the gift is from you that will put stars in her eyes. These gift suggestions are within reach of your allowance:

Accessories—A bright silk scarf.

A gleaming "gold" compact. A little gold, silver, brocade or velvet evening bag. A "jewelled" lipstick. A handy leather or metal box for bobby pins. A billfold in a gay color. A manicure kit. A diary. White wool or angora mittens. A fragrant bath set of cologne, powder, etc. Bubble bath in a gay, gifty package.

Books—Famous classics that everybody should read and likes to own. Book stores and teachers will help you choose one she'll like.

Perfume—Light flower scents by well-known makers.

Records by her favorite band. A record holder. A snapshot album or pocket-size folder for snapshots.

DODGE ON GAMBLING

THE STATE of Missouri, as have others, is trying to do something about gambling. There has been a public awakening to the need for more stringent laws regulating gambling, and more strict enforcement of present statutes, following widespread scandals involving bribery of public officials, and the expose of great syndicates operating almost unmolested.

A bill strengthening Missouri's gambling laws was submitted to the state legislature, but failed of passage because members from Kansas City and St. Louis ducked the issue and refused to vote. As a result the measure failed of passage by a scant three votes. Some 18 members from the two cities left the floor when the roll was called.

It would be unfair to say these members had any particular interest in the gambling operations of their cities, and refused to vote against them. It would be more nearly the truth to say they simply backed away from a situation which has been almost impossible to control because of the known tie-up between gambling and politics. For gambling cannot prosper without protection, and protection comes only through political channels.

The United States has become a nation of gamblers. We are willing to take a chance on anything. Until that habit changes regulation will be futile because it is not popular.

RELATED ACTION

THE administration, belatedly, has moved against the Russian economy in a manner which should put an end to trade practices which have favored the Soviet. As authorized by Congress at its last session, President Truman ordered all trade concessions to Soviet Russia cancelled as of January 5. He also ordered an embargo on several types of furs from Russia and Red China.

Since August, 1937, Russia has been trading with the United States in the role of a favorite nation. The Soviet has been granted tariff concessions which were greatly to its benefit, and otherwise has enjoyed favors to its advantage.

All this has contributed to the strength of a nation which now threatens the security of this country, a country which backed the war in Korea which has resulted in 100,000 American casualties. The United States helped to build a Frankenstein which now threatens the security of this nation.

The order by President Truman — as authorized by Congress — is far-reaching and extends to all communist-controlled countries. This action will hit Russia where it hurts.

George E. Sokolsky's

These Days

When I read John Gunther's article "Inside Ike" in Look magazine, I found this: "Eisenhower was MacArthur's chief ghost writer. Great kudos came to MacArthur in particular for his two biennial reports during this period, which have been described as the most 'classic' documents of their type ever written. Mostly, they were written by Dwight Eisenhower. Also, Eisenhower wrote much of MacArthur's celebrated 'Farewell to the Army' speech when he, MacArthur, resigned as chief of staff."

I picked up the telephone, made an inquiry at the source, and discovered, of course, that Eisenhower, either as a major or a general, had never written any speeches or reports for Gen. Douglas MacArthur. It is impossible to believe that Eisenhower ever authorized such a yarn.

To refresh my memory, I went to Frank Waldrop's book, "MacArthur on War," published in 1942, where are given the documents on which Eisenhower could have worked because of his position as military secretary to the general, but there is nothing in them which shows any similarity to the speeches that Eisenhower ever delivered in his own name.

I presume that the speech which Gunther calls "Farewell to the Army" is the "Speech to the Rainbow Division," delivered in 1935, which contains this paragraph:

"It was seventeen years ago—those days of old have vanished tone and tint; they have gone glimmering through the dreams of things that were. Their memory is a land where flowers of wondrous beauty and varied colors spring, watered by tears and coaxed and caressed into fuller bloom by the smiles of yesterday. Refrains no longer rise and fall from that land of used-to-be. We listen vainly but with thirsty ear for the witching melodies of days that are gone. Ghosts in olive drab and sky blue and German gray pass before our eyes; voices that have stolen away in the echoes from the battlefields no more ring out. The faint far whisper of forgotten songs no longer floats through the air. Youth . . . strength . . . aspirations . . . struggles . . . triumphs . . . despairs . . . wide winds sweeping . . . beacons flashing across uncharted depths . . . movements . . . vividness . . . radiance . . . shadows . . . faint bugle sounding reveille . . . far drums . . . beating the long roll . . . the crash of guns . . . the rattle of musketry . . . the still white crosses . . ."

"And now, we are met to remember."

Compare that paragraph for poetry and warmth with the speech that MacArthur delivered to Congress—the "Old Soldiers Never Die" speech—and the style is clearly that of the same author. Compare it with any speech that Eisenhower ever wrote and it must be obvious that Eisenhower could have had no hand in it.

If that paragraph was written by a hand other than that which prepared the last six speeches that MacArthur has delivered in this country since his return from Tokyo, then we must assume that Eisenhower is still MacArthur's ghost!

Collapsed Lung In Newborn

By HERMAN N. BUNDESEN, M.D.

THE newborn infant must begin to breathe immediately upon his entry into the world. Sometimes this most vital process is hampered, either by failure of a lung to expand or by its collapse shortly after birth.

Occurring frequently in premature infants and occasionally in the full-term baby, this condition is among the most common causes of death in the newborn.

Breathing Difficulty

Such children are marked by a pronounced bluish color, extreme difficulty in breathing and labored chest movements. Other conditions of the newborn, such as congenital heart disease or hemorrhage of the brain, may cause similar symptoms. However, the difference between these conditions can be readily detected by a trained physician.

A new method has been devised for the treatment of this condition and entails close cooperation between the attending physician, surgeon and doctor trained in anesthesia.

Windpipe Cleared

With this method, the windpipe is cleared by means of a rubber tube, of all secretions of material that may have accumulated. Then, with the use of a local anesthetic, because the giving of an inhalation anesthetic would be extremely dangerous to the infant, the chest is opened by the surgeon, so that he can look at the lungs. This, according to reports, seems to be easily and simply carried out.

The anesthetist then administers oxygen to the child under slight pressure, in order to re-expand the lungs. If the lungs expand from this type of treatment, the child generally recovers from the surgery, and no other abnormality in his breathing mechanism occurs.

It is believed that this new method of treatment for collapsed lung in infants may be life-saving to many of them.

QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS

R. H.: What is the best treatment for inflammation of the colon caused by bacterial infection?

Answer: Usually, the use of the sulfasuxidine or sulfaguanidine under a physician's direction is effective in most bacterial bowel infections. Those persons not helped in this manner may take one of the newer antibiotics—auramycin, chloramphenicol or terramycin. This treatment should be carried out only under the direction of your physician.

ONE MAN'S OPINION

It was quite a sight to see all that traffic not moving in New York during the practice air alert . . . just like any weekday from 8 a. m. to 8 p. m.

Some vehicles were slow to stop and I understand Mike Quill can do this complete tieup business eight minutes quicker than the city authorities.

Their's was a surprise and lasted less than half an hour; his also are a surprise and can run as long as a week.

But they must love him in New York; nobody yet has exercised the common nuisance ordinances and tossed him in the jug.

It seems kind of odd preparing for a visit from a foreign invader when there are no plans past, present or future for handling the Quills of the country.

One reason could be that the potential invader, so far isn't a leader of voting sheep.

CHAPTER THIRTY-FIVE
MOLLIE took a steady breath and began to outline to the exasperated Dr. Voss Johnny's case, to state her diagnosis, being very careful of her manner lest she openly betray her opinion of this bleeding goat.

"Now, I don't think all this talk is necessary," Dr. Voss broke in. "I've read the history, noted your diagnosis and recommendation—I've examined the boy—and I thoroughly agree that an operation must be performed. Immediately."

Mollie handed the chart to Peter, stood up.

"You Staff doctors don't even carry your own papers, do you?" Dr. Voss challenged, still in that superior tone, that critical manner.

"I don't understand," said Mollie, actually baffled.

"Oh, all this rigmarole. An intention to carry the chart. A nurse to open the door! Patient about gets lost in the shuffle. But I'll not let that happen to Johnny."

"Excuse me, Dr. Voss," said Mollie, her voice clear—and threatening. "I was about to tell Dr. Shepherd to put Johnny's case on the schedule. I'll do it before the fracture pin, doctor."

"Now, now, just wait a minute!" said Dr. Voss. Peter stopped in the doorway. "I don't think you need change your schedule, Dr. Brooks."

"Johnny's case needs immediate attention!" she snapped. "That's what I have in mind. Now I suppose you have a second operating room in this big building . . ."

"We have no operating rooms in this building," said Mollie furiously, coldly.

The little doctor blinked. "You don't mean that!"

"All operations are done in the theaters over at Boone. We have ten such theaters there. I have one assigned to me this morning, and if you'll excuse us, I think I can attend to Johnny as well as my other cases. If you care to observe—"

"Now, just hold your horses, young woman," said the little man, bouncing with offended dignity. "I've no intention of observing anything! My idea—you brought up the matter of my relationship to Johnny—and I can promise you that I didn't come all the way down here with any plan to give that boy less than the best."

"Oh, yes, here, Dr. Voss . . ."

Peter broke in. "Just you stay out of this, boy. I know my position here as specialist called in on consultation."

Mollie gasped. And almost laughed.

"I promised the family that I'd take care of Johnny, and that's just what I'm going to do. Dr. Brooks, suppose you go get Johnny's father to sign the release for surgery, and this young man can take me over to the proper operating room where I'll do the operation on the boy's leg. Myself!"

It took Mollie a second to comprehend what he had said.

"Now, I had hoped to consult with Dr. Cowan," this Voss went on. "In fact, I hoped he might operate. But it seems I've let time get ahead of me. I find that Dr. Cowan is no longer active. I imagine he is able to consult, but I'd hesitate to bother him in as open and shut case as this. But, oh dear, what a loss to the profession! Now there was a surgeon! Even for his day—"

"Dr. Voss!" Even Peter jumped, though he had been watching Mollie. She took a step toward the little bearded man. "Have you ever so much as seen Dr. Cowan?"

"Well, I don't recall—"

"I thought not. Because you'd never speak as if he were, could be, decrepit. I don't know how old you are, Dr. Voss—but Nicholas Cowan is no more than forty! He is more active than you were in your cradle! He lectures and demonstrates, he directs our bone bank. He put in four years during the war as chief orthopedic surgeon for the armed forces—"

"Well, now that's good news," said the little man, obviously impervious to attacks, however righteous.

"But Mollie, was not finished. Her heat increased until it would singe Dr. Voss's thick hide. "As for your operating," she said scornfully, "not in the Group, you won't. Do you so much as understand the term closed-staff hospital?"

"My dear woman—"

"I am not your dear woman! I am Dr. Mary Brooks, Staff orthopedic surgeon of the Boone Group. As such, I extended to a patient's family the courtesy of a discussion with you concerning that patient, every courtesy will continue to be extended to you, but—"

She gulped, and shook her hair back from her face, clutching at her poise. "I'm sorry, Dr. Voss," she said, more calmly. "I—I am worried by all this delay for Johnny. I would very much like to save the boy's leg."

"So would I," rasped the offended little man.

"I don't make the rules for the Group," Mollie pointed out. "But they are fixed. It is impossible for an outside doctor to operate in our theaters. Now, I do hope you will get Johnny's father to agree to an operation so that the case can be cared for some time today. Good morning, Dr. Voss!"

When Dr. Brooks returned to Children's, it was to find that the family had taken the boy out of the hospital.

"Poor Johnny," said Mollie. "We couldn't hold him, doctor," Ragdale pointed out.

"No, of course not. But—I can't help being upset about the whole thing."

She couldn't help it; Johnny's handsome, vivid face kept coming into her mind while she held her office hours that afternoon; worry about the child went home with her.

Back at the hospital, Mollie secured the address of Johnny's parents, knowing that she could not call them by phone, nor urge them to return Johnny to the care which Children's could give him, the care the boy needed so badly. But she must do something! Time was sliding by, they'd already lost nearly a week fooling around with that Voss. And the boy must be cared for! She didn't make the rules for the Group, as she had reminded the strange doctor, but surely there were still means by which she, a Staff doctor, could reach this patient without breaking out of ethical bounds. Hazel had hinted that she should talk to Nicholas. Mollie longed to, in spite of his recent aloofness, his warning about Clara and the gossip thorns fostered by any intimacy with the woman. . . . She needed Nicholas, his strong calm, his good sense. Yes, and his fair criticism! He was a wise—and patient—man. She went into the hotel to phone him, ask for his help. She so needed help—

"Hey, Mollie!" She whirled. It was Peter coming out of the bar. "I tried to phone you—" He regarded her anxiously. "Something wrong?"

"Do I look so bad?"

His smile was instant. "You couldn't look bad. But you're worried . . ."

"Yes, of course. About Johnny Ormond."

He gestured to the bar. "What say we have a drink?"

"Would you just as soon go home with me?" she asked. "I'm tired—"

"Then home's the place for you." He took her arm.

Back in her apartment he said, "You're the girl who leaves her cases in the hospital."

"I can't seem to, with Johnny," she admitted. She turned to face the young man beside her. "Oh, Peter," she said tensely, "if that butcher—I'm sure he is one! And I could save Johnny's leg, even after all this time. I know I could. I'd let another Staff doctor do it. I told McIntosh to get Jossek—I wasn't insisting that it be me. I'd be glad to do anything to save Johnny's leg! Do you suppose Voss took him up to Benton this afternoon? I'd be tempted to drive up there—"

"Hey, hey!" he cried.

"She was close to tears."

"I never saw you so worked up," he marveled.

"Well, why not? It seems the whole thing has been so bungled—and I feel to blame!"

"The boy's all right."

"Not with Herbie taking care of him," she said with conviction.

"Oh, he's at the City hospital. He went in there as an emergency this evening."

She stared at him. "How do you know that?"

"It's true, I checked."

"Then he's at least safe from Voss. That's a closed hospital, too."

"That's right. I expect Herbie wanted to take him to Benton, but that hospital operates on a strictly cash-on-the-barrel-head basis, and while railroad people are well paid, they have a way of being chronically short on cash . . ."

Mollie gave him a look.

"The Voss brothers explain that they can hold the costs down to a minimum if they demand pay in advance." His mobile mouth drew down at the corner. "Better get some rest now."

DODGE ON GAMBLING

THE STATE of Missouri, as have others, is trying to do something about gambling. There has been a public awakening to the need for more stringent laws regulating gambling, and more strict enforcement of present statutes, following widespread scandals involving bribery of public officials, and the expose of great syndicates operating almost unmoled.

A bill strengthening Missouri's gambling laws was submitted to the state legislature, but failed of passage because members from Kansas City and St. Louis ducked the issue and refused to vote. As a result the measure failed of passage by a scant three votes. Some 13 members from the two cities left the floor when the roll was called.

It would be unfair to say these members had any particular interest in the gambling operations of their cities, and refused to vote against them. It would be more nearly the truth to say they simply backed away from a situation which has been almost impossible to control because of the known tie-up between gambling and politics. For gambling cannot prosper without protection, and protection comes only through political channels.

The United States has become a nation of gamblers. We are willing to take a chance on anything. Until that habit changes regulation will be futile because it is not popular.

"Oh, see here, Dr. Voss..."

Peter broke in.

"Just you stay out of this, boy. I know my position here as specialist called in on consultation."

Mollie gasped. And almost laughed.

"I promised the family that I'd take care of Johnny, and that's just what I'm going to do. Dr. Brooks, suppose you go get Johnny's father to sign the release for surgery, and this young man can take me over to the proper operating room where I'll do the operation on the boy's leg. Myself!"

It took Mollie a second to comprehend what he had said.

"Now, I had hoped to consult with Dr. Cowan," this Voss went on. "In fact, I hoped he might operate. But it seems I've let time get ahead of me. I find that Dr. Cowan is no longer active. I imagine he is able to consult, but I'd hesitate to bother him in as open and shut case as this. But, oh dear, what a loss to the profession! Now there was a surgeon! Even for his day—"

"Dr. Voss!" Even Peter jumped, though he had been watching Mollie. She took a step toward the little bearded man. "Have you ever so much as seen Dr. Cowan?"

"Well, I don't recall—"

"I thought not. Because you'd never speak as if he were, or could be, decrepit. I don't know how old you are, Dr. Voss—but Nicholas Cowan is no more than forty! He is more active than you were in your cradle! He lectures and demonstrates, he directs our bone bank. He put in four years during the war as chief orthopedic surgeon for the armed forces—"

"Well, now that's good news," said the little man, obviously impervious to attacks, however righteous.

But Mollie was not finished. Her heat increased until it would singe Dr. Voss's thick hide. "As for your operating," she said scornfully, "not in the Group, you won't. Do you so much as understand the term closed-staff hospital?"

"My dear woman—"

"I am not your dear woman! I am Dr. Mary Brooks, Staff orthopedic surgeon of the Boone Group. As such, I extended to a patient's family the courtesy of a discussion with you concerning that patient; every courtesy will continue to be extended to you, but—"

She gulped, and shook her hair back from her face, clutching at her poise. "I'm sorry, Dr. Voss," she said, more calmly. "I—I am worried by all this delay for Johnny. I would very much like to save the boy's leg."

"So would I," rasped the offended little man.

"I don't make the rules for the Group," Mollie pointed out. "But they are fixed. It is impossible for an outside doctor to operate in our theaters. Now, I do hope you will get Johnny's father to agree to an operation so that the case can be cared for some time today. Good morning, Dr. Voss!"

When Dr. Brooks returned to Children's, it was to find that the family had taken the boy out of the hospital.

"Poor Johnny," said Mollie.

"We couldn't hold him, doctor," Ragsdale pointed out.

"No, of course not. But—I can't help being upset about the whole thing."

She couldn't help it; Johnny's handsome, vivid face kept coming into her mind while she held her office hours that afternoon; worry about the child went home with her.

Back at the hospital, Mollie scoured the address of Johnny's parents, knowing that she could not call them by phone, nor urge them to return Johnny to the care which Children's could give him, the care the boy needed so badly.

But she must do something! Time was sliding by, they'd already lost nearly a week fooling around with that Voss. And the boy must be cared for! She didn't make the rules for the Group, as she had reminded the strange doctor, but surely there were still means by which she, a Staff doctor, could reach this patient without breaking out of ethical bounds. Hazel had hinted that she should talk to Nicholas. Mollie longed to, in spite of his recent aloofness, his warning about Clara and the gossip-thorns fostered by any intimacy with the woman. . . . She needed Nicholas, his strong calm, his good sense. Yes, and his fair criticism! He was a wise—and patient—man. She went into the hotel to phone him, ask for his help. She so needed help—

"Hey, Mollie!" She whirled. It was Peter coming out of the bar. "I tried to phone you—" He regarded her anxiously. "Something wrong?"

"Do I look so bad?"

His smile was instant. "You couldn't look bad. But you're worried..."

"Yes, of course. About Johnny Ormond."

He gestured to the bar. "What say we have a drink?"

"Would you just as soon go home with me?" she asked. "I'm tired..."

"Then home's the place for you." He took her arm.

"Back in her apartment he said, 'You're the girl who leaves her cases in the hospital.'"

"I can't seem to, with Johnny," she admitted. She turned to face the young man beside her. "Oh, Peter, she said tensely, 'if that butcher—I'm sure he is one! And I could save Johnny's leg, even after all this time. I know I could. I'd let another Staff doctor do it. I told McIntosh to get Joske—I wasn't insisting that it be me. I'd be glad to do anything to save Johnny's leg! Do you suppose Voss took him up to Benton this afternoon? I'd be tempted to drive up there—'"

"Hey, hey!" he cried.

She was close to tears.

"I never saw you so worked up," he marveled.

"Well, why not? It seems the whole thing has been so bungled—and I feel to blame!"

"The boy's all right."

"Not with Herbie taking care of him," she said with conviction.

"Oh, he's at the City hospital. He was in there as an emergency this evening."

She stared at him. "How do you know that?"

"It's true, I checked."

"Then he's at least safe from Voss. That's a closed hospital, too."

"That's right. I expect Herbie wanted to take him to Benton, but that hospital operates on a strictly cash-on-the-barrel-head basis, and while railroad people are well paid, they have a way of being chronically short on cash..."

"The Voss brothers explain that they can hold the costs down to a minimum if they demand pay in advance." His mobile mouth drew down at the corner. "Better get some rest now."

NEW YORK—Ted Saucier is a portly, mustachioed, suave man who for more than 20 years handled the public relations of the Waldorf-Astoria hotel. During that time he became the confidante of kings, queens, saxophone players and cowboy movie stars, and finally, when Conrad Hilton bought the Waldorf and Saucier left to set up his own business, he had become the man in New York who knew more celebrities than anyone else.

Mr. Saucier at last has put this knowledge of the noted and the notorious to some concrete use. He has brought out a portly, suave book called Bottoms Up, which is just about the most elegant volume ever to come across my cigar burn.

It costs seven and a half bucks, and, to the practiced drinker, it seems worth every penny of it—if only for the recipe on page 121 called Heimer's Host. This one will, as they say, kill you. Or at least mutilate you.

Leaving through Bottoms Up, however, I became disillusioned. You know, you can stand alongside of men at a bar for years on end and think you have them figured out honestly as Scotch-and-water drinkers, or rye-and-ginger participants or souls who take their liquor neat—in other words, intelligent, perceptive citizens who understand one of the basic truths of life... that whisky was meant to be tasted, not disguised.

The next thing you know, you pick up something like Mr. Saucier's impressive volume—and discover that this so-called honest drinker is the kind of man who puts a slice of pineapple, a half-teaspoon of sugar and a dash of cointreau into good,

Kitchen May Be Death Chamber, Says Specialist

COLUMBUS, Dec. 3—Most dangerous room in the farm home is the kitchen, according to W. E. Stuckey, safety specialist with the Agricultural Extension Service, Ohio State University and the Industrial Commission of Ohio.

He advised homemakers, spending more time in kitchen in preparation of holidays, to take extra precautions. The National Safety Council, according to Stuckey, has listed common dangers and some safeguards.

Keep knives out of reach of children. When carving meats, use a fork with a knife guard and make cutting strokes away from the body. Turn pans so handles do not project beyond stoves. Before opening a hot container, cover your hand with a cloth and lift the far side of the cover first.

Use a safe step-stool instead of a pile of boxes or chairs to reach high places. Each step on a stool should be wide and have a non-skid surface.

Keep matches beyond children's reach. Start kitchen range fires with something other than gasoline or kerosene and dry-clean clothes someplace other than the kitchen. Check stove pipes and flues regularly. Keep medicines, insecticides and drugs out of kitchen and away from children.

Apply first aid to any injury immediately.

U.S. Project Plans Korea Milk Supply

10,000 Goats Due To Be Sent Abroad

DAYTON, Dec. 3 — The Heifer Project—an inter-faith rehabilitation program—plans to send 10,000 milk goats to Korea as soon as possible after an armistice.

Thurl Metzger, executive secretary of the project, announcing the plans, said the program would be coordinated with the United Nations Korean Reconstruction Agency.

Launched originally about five years ago, the Heifer Project has shipped more than 6,000 heifers and a large number of goats to needy individuals, institutions, and agricultural experimental stations in 21 different nations. It is supported by Protestant and Catholic groups throughout the nation.

Because of the uncertainty of a definite Korean armistice date, the project for sending goats is concentrating on getting purchase funds rather than on obtaining the animals themselves, Metzger said.

"OUR HOPE is to have sufficient funds available for the first large shipment of animals by March 1," he reported. "Some of these may be purchased in Japan because of transportation difficulties."

Metzger returned recently from a tour of Korea, during which he explored the need for shipping livestock to war-devastated areas.

He reported the goat population in Southern Korea has decreased 50 per cent since the beginning of hostilities, and cattle, including dairy animals, 45 per cent.

Said the secretary: "Since the average farm is only three and a half acres, and since a goat can live on less than a cow and is also practically immune to tuberculosis, it seems better to ship goats than cattle at this time. However, we plan to ship from 50 to 100 high-grade bulls for cross-breeding purposes."

Students Predict Labor Comeback

COLUMBUS, Dec. 3—Two students from Oxford university in England have predicted in a weekend Columbus Town Meeting that the Labor Party will return to power in England within three years.

The English undergraduates said Americans generally had the wrong impression of the British Labor Party and failed to appreciate progress made in England since 1945 when the Tory government was ousted. One of them told the audience:

"Any politician who would drop the health plan would be cutting his throat. It has been a great success and overwhelmingly accepted by the British people."

Legion OKs 5 New Charters

COLUMBUS, Dec. 3—The Ohio American Legion has confirmed charters for five new posts and revoked three others at a meeting of the executive committee in Columbus.

New charters were confirmed yesterday for posts at Bloomdale in Wood County, Hammondsville in Jefferson County, Northridge and Trotwood in Montgomery County and Baltic in Tuscarawas County.

Charters revoked, "mostly for inactivity," were Turners post 636, Cincinnati; and posts at Fowler, Trumbull County, and Northfield, Summit County.

Fifth Of Yanks Given Nearly Half Of Income

WASHINGTON, Dec. 3—The top fifth of the United States population gets nearly half of the nation's money income while the bottom fifth gets only three per cent.

This was disclosed by a preliminary analysis of information gathered in the 1950 Census. Families and "unrelated individuals", that is individuals not forming part of families, were asked what money income they had in 1949.

The distribution of income among them was as follows:

- Highest fifth—47 per cent.
- Second highest fifth—24 per cent.
- Third fifth—17 per cent.
- Fourth fifth—nine per cent.
- Poorest fifth—three per cent.

The Census Bureau said: "There was a greater variation in the distribution of income among the 10 largest states than among regions. Although the share of the income received by the poorest 20 per cent varied little from one state to another (about three per cent), the share received by the highest fifth ranged from 44 per cent in Massachusetts, Michigan and Ohio to 49 per cent in Missouri, New York and Texas.

Southeastern Pennsylvania produces three-fourths of the cultivated mushrooms grown for canning in the United States.

The program for the small group of law agents included a series of lectures and demonstrations dealing with duties of the coroner, police and prosecutor; laws pertaining to homicide; police duties at the scene; examination and photography of the scene; search for fingerprints; murder masquerading as accidental death, suicide, or death from natural causes; identification from bones and fragments of bodies; and the lie detector.

Child Problems and Solutions

By GARRY CLEVELAND MYERS, PhD

I have offered some suggestions for choosing toys with a purpose—not only to amuse the child, but also to help him develop while being amused. I limited the suggestions to toys from which to choose a few for the youngster up to four. Now for the older children. Interested in physical play, the child from four to six needs toys which develop increasing muscular activity. As he is growing more ready for cooperative play, he should have toys which can be used by a group indoors and outdoors, for vigorous play as well as for quiet group experience.

Gym equipment—climbing bars, low rings, slides, swings, tumbling mats, punching bag, trapeze used in doorways or on a cellar beam; also wagons, tri-cycles and other wheel toys are good.

At this age boys and girls like to play at housekeeping and need all sorts of housekeeping equipment: tubs, washing and ironing boards, clothesline, non-electric iron, stove, telephone, dolls of varying sizes and types (the simpler the better). Elaborate dolls, or toys which do all sorts of things, leave little to the child's imagination.

There is interest in costumes—cowboy, Indian, nurse, fireman, policeman uniforms.

Materials which stimulate creation—paints, finger paints, modeling sets, easy weaving, paste, blunt-point scissors. Good, too, for this age are blocks of different shapes and sizes, all sorts of toys to use with block building.

ALSO AUTOS, CRANES, planes, boats, farm animals, zoo animals, puzzles and various construction

Surface Mold In Grain Cited

WASHINGTON, Dec. 3—Engineers say you can stop surface molding of dry, stored grain by drawing cool air through it during the fall and winter. They warn that storing grain or shelled corn at a safe moisture content is no guarantee against surface spoilage.

Cool weather often causes the moisture of the grain to move from the relatively warm grain in the center of the storage to the colder grain at the surface. Experiments have proved that low-velocity cool air forced through the grain controls moisture migration.

The Ettingers put up temporarily in the home of Charles P. Taft. They are sponsored here by Christ church, of which the Tafts are members.

Chicken Heaven Set, But Stew Pot Also Ready

RAVENA, Dec. 3—A chicken could ask for little more than the comforts Frank R. Fageol offers it on his 725-acre Cottage Hill farm. Fageol spent more than $40,000 creating a "chicken heaven" to try to make chicken dinners "home grown."

At present, five-sixths of the broilers come from farms in Maryland, Virginia, West Virginia and Indiana.

Fageol and his manager, Jay Reynolds, have provided an unusually easy life for the birds.

Chain conveyor belts keep feed going through feeder troughs and lights burn 24 hours a day so no bird will have an excuse for not getting fat.

Small faucets provide an even flow of cool water, and gas heaters with electrical blowers make for even temperatures.

The chickens parade about on 27,000 square feet of springy built-up litter.

If a stew pot weren't waiting at the other end of the line, life as a chicken at Cottage Hill would be beautiful.

COLUMBUS, Dec. 3—Mrs. Irene S. Beals would like to help Uncle Sam with his penny shortage, but she has a problem.

Her pennies, estimated at up to 20,000, are in a large liquor display bottle, two feet high and 23 inches in circumference.

Mrs. Beals is afraid to apply too much force on the bottle for fear of breakage. And the pennies won't pour out of the small slot at the top.

She said Uncle Sam can have the pennies—if he can figure a way to get them out of the bottle without breaking it.

Child Problems and Solutions

By GARRY CLEVELAND MYERS, PhD

I have offered some suggestions for choosing toys with a purpose—not only to amuse the child, but also to help him develop while being amused. I limited the suggestions to toys from which to choose a few for the youngster up to four. Now for the older children.

Interested in physical play, the child from four to six needs toys which develop increasing muscular activity. As he is growing more ready for cooperative play, he should have toys which can be used by a group indoors and outdoors, for vigorous play as well as for quiet group experience.

Gym equipment—climbing bars, low rings, slides, swings, tumbling mats, punching bag, trapeze used in doorways or on a cellar beam; also wagons, tri-cycles and other wheel toys are good.

At this age boys and girls like to play at housekeeping and need all sorts of housekeeping equipment: tubs, washing and ironing boards, clothesline, non-electric iron, stove, telephone, dolls of varying sizes and types (the simpler the better). Elaborate dolls, or toys which do all sorts of things, leave little to the child's imagination.

There is interest in costumes—cowboy, Indian, nurse, fireman, policeman uniforms.

Materials which stimulate creation—paints, finger paints, modeling sets, easy weaving, paste, blunt-point scissors. Good, too, for this age are blocks of different shapes and sizes, all sorts of toys to use with block building.

ALSO AUTOS, CRANES, planes, boats, farm animals, zoo animals, puzzles and various construction toys: large ditch diggers, dump trucks, road-making toys, to use outside in real earth.

Musical instruments appeal—tambourines, triangles, bells, xylophones, chimes, cymbals.

From six to eight there is growing interest in group play, in games which involve skill, in collecting, in making things, in physical activity, in imaginative play and, if materials are provided, in creation.

Wheel toys, especially two-wheelers, arouse great interest. Trapeze bars, rings and parallel bars, jumping ropes, skates, hiking meters, contribute to physical development.

Games which require two or more players, games which use number skills and scoring, group play are fun. Games like anagrams and dominoes are popular.

Materials for handcraft and creation—paints, crayons, clay, materials for sewing and weaving, simple block printing; work-benches with good tools, soft wood and proper nails.

Imaginative play becomes more "real." Dolls become "babies," housekeeping grows more like "the way Mother does it." Equipment for washing, ironing, cooking, cleaning, is used much, but need not be elaborate. Paper dolls are popular with girls and sometimes with boys. Costumes for dressing up are important—aviator, soldier, sailor, nurse, doctor, postman, policeman, cowboy.

For collecting—loose-leaf notebooks, cases or boxes for storing collection (may be homemade), butterfly nets. Boys at this age are much interested in making kites, boats, airplanes, automobiles.

Also include some good books and one or two of the children's magazines. (My graded list of books for the child from six to twelve may be had in a stamped envelope sent me in care of this newspaper.)

Answering Parents' Questions
Q. Why don't you write a column urging the husband to share in normal social recreation with his expectant wife and thus make her life happier?

A. I have done so and also included this advice in my special bulletin "A Baby Is Expected" which may be had by sending a self-addressed, stamped envelope to me in care of this paper.

Red Sub Crews Seen In Pacific

SYDNEY, Dec. 3—A Sydney newspaper quoted New Guinea officials today as saying they believe the Soviet Union is basing Red fleet submarines at unadministered Pacific islands between Malaya and the Philippines.

The Sydney Daily Telegraph also said New Guinea officials have confirmed reports that natives of Emirau Island watched unidentified submarines surface and send parties ashore to inspect an unused airstrip on their island.

11-Member DP Family Arrives

CINCINNATI, Dec. 3—The Ettinger family, all 11 of them, arrived in Cincinnati yesterday after a voyage across the Atlantic from a displaced person camp in Germany.

The family—Romanian-born Vasil and Margareta and their nine children—is one of the largest DP families to enter this country since World War II.

The Ettingers put up temporarily in the home of Charles P. Taft. They are sponsored here by Christ church, of which the Tafts are members.

Chicken Heaven Set, But Stew Pot Also Ready

RAVENA, Dec. 3—A chicken could ask for little more than the comforts Frank R. Pageol offers it on his 725-acre Cottage Hill farm. Pageol spent more than $40,000 creating a "chicken heaven" to try to make chicken dinners "home grown." At present, five-sixths of the broilers come from farms in Maryland, Virginia, West Virginia and Indiana.

Pageol and his manager, Jay Reynolds, have provided an unusually easy life for the birds.

Chain conveyor belts keep feed going through feeder troughs and lights burn 24 hours a day so no bird will have an excuse for not getting fat.

Small faucets provide an even flow of cool water, and gas heaters with electrical blowers make for even temperatures.

The chickens parade about on 27,000 square feet of springy built-up litter.

If a stew pot weren't waiting at the other end of the line, life as a chicken at Cottage Hill would be beautiful.

Nearly All Gas Stations Closed

CLEVELAND, Dec. 3—The Cleveland Independent Gasoline Dealers Association says 90 per cent of its members have joined in a Sunday closing policy.

It estimated 75 per cent of the 1,200 independent stations in Cuyahoga County were closed. The association sponsored the policy saying it hoped to offset rising costs of labor and overhead.

In Memoriam

IN MEMORIAM

In loving memory of my beloved husband, Ray F. Pierce, who passed away three years ago today Dec. 3, 1948. They say time heals all sorrow. And helps us to forget. But time so far has only proved how much I miss him yet. God gave me strength to face it. And courage to bear up. But what it meant to lose him. No one will ever know. I am missed by his widow, Mrs. Ray F. Pierce.

Browns And Rams Figure To Clash For The 1951 Pro Gridiron Title

NEW YORK, Dec. 3.—It looks today as if the Los Angeles Rams and the Cleveland Browns are headed for another battle for championship honors in the National Football League.

The two teams that met for the p.c. crown last season are at the tops of their respective divisions and it will take some doing to get them down.

The Browns can end the American Conference race Sunday by taking the Pittsburgh Steelers and the Rams can clinch at least a tie in the National Conference by beating the Detroit Lions.

The Rams have a tougher row to hoe, but if they can muster the same power that gave them a 42-17 romp over the Chicago Bears yesterday, they should be in the title playoff Dec. 23.

THE VICTORY gave the Rams a 7-3 record and wins over the Lions and Green Bay in their finale would ice matters.

But Coach Paul Brown said today he was unhappy despite the 49-28 licking his mighty champions handed the Chicago Cardinals.

He tried unsuccessfully to throt-

Sokolsky's These Days

But the fact is that these two generals have had no contact for nearly 13 years. Precisely how MacArthur wrote and delivered his speech on the Battleship Missouri, accepting the surrender of Japan, without consulting his ghost, is surely beyond the understanding of Gunther or anybody else. In fact, few men in modern life but MacArthur could have spoken these lines:

"We have had our last chance. If we do not now devise some greater and more equitable system of Armageddon will be at our door. The problem basically is theological and involves a spiritual recrudescence and improvement of human character that will synchronize with our almost matchless advance in science, art, literature, and all material and cultural developments of the past two thousand years. It must be of the spirit if we are to save the flesh."

That speech was delivered in Tokyo Bay on Sept. 2, 1945. A few days before that, Eisenhower was reported in Frankfurt holding a conference with U. S. occupation authorities in Germany.

Gunther does not say that Eisenhower ghosted the Battleship Missouri speech or the "Old Soldiers Never Die" speech, but as a literary detective, I read them all and find them not only stylistically MacArthur and not Eisenhower, but of one piece of cloth.

As a matter of fact, MacArthur talks privately as he does in his orations. His is a rounded type of language. Eisenhower does not talk or write that way. MacArthur has a style and a way of his own. Such men do not come in pairs, nor do they use ghosts.

Blaik Says Army Needs 5 Years To Beat Navy

PHILADELPHIA, Dec. 3.—"It will be five years before Army again will be able to offer the Navy a real argument on the football field."

That statement came today from Coach Earl Blaik after watching his Cadets take a history-making 42-7 lacing from the Middies in Philadelphia's Municipal Stadium last Saturday.

Blaik, with what promised to be one of his best teams completely shattered by the cribbing scandal, figures it'll take that long to mold a top eleven. As the situation now stands, Blaik does not have many athletes of the caliber he desires at West Point.

But the veteran coach again declined to say whether he'll be around to complete the five-year plan or even to start it.

"To be honest with you, I haven't given much thought to my personal future," said Blaik. "My only concern has been to turn out the best football team possible with the material on hand."

There have been reports the retired Army colonel would leave the Point this year to accept either another coaching position or enter the business world.

Early Planning Needed For Yule Home-Decorating Contest

Lighting Tips Given By Experts

Varied Arrangements Being Suggested

With a home decoration contest in the offing for the Circleville Christmas season, lighting experts have been issuing suggestions.

Early planning and selection of equipment, say holiday lighting specialists, is often the key to an outstanding arrangement. They say:

"Let your imagination dictate how you decorate your house. Consider, too, the possibilities of emphasizing the architectural lines of a house or letting it suggest a pattern for your holiday arrangement."

Strings of outdoor lights along the lower eaves and atop the gable create an interesting design. Focal points of interest which should be an important part of every decorating plan, are lighted trees and luminous candles flanking the doorway. An indoor tree in a bay window can be balanced with a smaller one in window.

For an entirely different arrangement, try outlining a small frame house with festoons of evergreen.

Here the focal point of interest centers around the graceful loops of lighted greens fanned from the peak of the gabled roof to the lawn below.

ANOTHER EXAMPLE of how distinctive the lighting arrangement can be simply by outlining a house with colored lights.

Silhouette cutouts arranged in a home workshop from scraps of construction board, then mounted to baseboard and each figure painted black to give the shadow picture effect.

A string of colored lights can be arranged behind the figures to give them depth and to light the background.

Lighting specialists recommend placing cutouts against light colored backgrounds for best results.

One of the questions which holiday lighting experts are often asked is how to make the most effective use of a minimum of lighting equipment.

One of the best ways, of course, is to concentrate on color in both lighting effect and decoration.

An unusual holiday doorway arrangement requires only a couple of strands of outdoor lights, a 150-watt projector spotlight, a couple of "homemade" snowmen and cut-out lettering for the door.

Station the pair of snowmen (made from covered wire frames) at each side of the doorway to greet guests. Fashion your own individual holiday message from glittering cutout letters and attach it to the doorway.

IF THE DOORWAY is slightly recessed, outline the front edge of the porch roof with festoons using colored bulbs.

To create your color effect, use red and white bulbs in the festooning and a blue color lens on a 150-watt projector spotlight to highlight the doorway.

"Santa's boots" on the doorstep provide the theme for another clever holiday decorating arrangement.

Naturally, to be most effective,

CLEVELAND, Dec. 3 — George F. Traub thinks he found a cousin among a group of war orphans pictured on the front page of a Cleveland newspaper.

The youngsters are touring the United States under the sponsorship of the Foster Parents Plan which operates a home for needy and war-orphaned youngsters near London, England.

Among those pictured when their tour reached Cleveland was Hanka Traub, an 11-year-old girl who was found by liberating Allied forces when they reached Auschwitz prison in Austria.

Officials of the plan said her parents doubtless perished at the prison. Then six years old, the little girl spoke some German words and a little Czechoslovakian.

Traub, who owns a department store in suburban Euclid, came here a dozen years ago from Prague, Czechoslovakia.

He says he had a niece, also named Hanka Traub, who reportedly died in the Auschwitz prison. She would have been 26 by now.

Mansfield Draft Sendoff Is Noted

MANSFIELD, Dec. 3—Selective Service inductees from the Mansfield area are getting proof they are appreciated by their home town folks.

Under a plan inaugurated last Spring, Mansfield patriotic organizations and their auxiliaries serve hot coffee and doughnuts to the young inductees before they leave for their armed service stations.

A committee directing the work says it is aimed at showing the boys the sponsoring groups are interested in them as well as grateful.

Santa's boots should be "oversize" so make them over simple wire frames covered with shiny red oilcloth. Use cotton-batten for white "fur" around the top.

Fill boots with crumpled newspaper and top off with some discarded or inexpensive toys as sketched at the right.

Complete the decoration by tacking a panel of dark green oilcloth with painted or cutout letters to form word "greetings" on the outside of the door.

Focus attention on the decoration by spotlighting it with a projector spotlight 150 watts in an outdoor-type holder placed or the lawn below the door.

Early Planning Needed For Yule Home-Decorating Contest

Lighting Tips Given By Experts

Varied Arrangements Being Suggested

With a home decoration contest in the offing for the Circleville Christmas season, lighting experts have been issuing suggestions.

Early planning and selection of equipment, say holiday lighting specialists, is often the key to an outstanding arrangement. They say:

"Let your imagination dictate how you decorate your house. Consider, too, the possibilities of emphasizing the architectural lines of a house or letting it suggest a pattern for your holiday arrangement."

Strings of outdoor lights along the lower eaves and atop the gable create an interesting design. Focal points of interest which should be an important part of every decorating plan, are lighted trees and luminous candles flanking the doorway. An indoor tree in a bay window can be balanced with a smaller one in window.

For an entirely different arrangement, try outlining a small frame house with festoons of evergreen.

Here the focal point of interest centers around the graceful loops of lighted greens fanned from the peak of the gabled roof to the lawn below.

ANOTHER EXAMPLE of how distinctive lighting arrangement can be simply by outlining a house with colored lights.

Silhouette cutout arrangements can be fashioned in a home workshop from scraps of construction board, then mounted to baseboard and each figure painted black to give the shadow picture effect.

A string of colored lights can be arranged behind the figures to give them depth and to light the background.

Lighting specialists recommend placing cutouts against light colored backgrounds for best results.

One of the questions which holiday lighting experts are often asked is how to make the most effective use of a minimum of lighting equipment.

One of the best ways, of course, is to concentrate on color in both lighting effect and decoration.

An unusual holiday doorway arrangement requires only a couple of strands of outdoor lights, a 150-watt projector spotlight, a couple of "homemade" snowmen and cut-out lettering for the door.

Station the pair of snowmen (made from covered wire frames) at each side of the doorway to greet guests. Fashion your own individual holiday message from glittering cutout letters and attach it to the doorway.

IF THE DOORWAY is slightly recessed, outline the front edge of the porch roof with festoons using colored bulbs.

To create your color effect, use red and white bulbs in the festooning and a blue color lens on a 150-watt projector spotlight to highlight the doorway.

"Santa's boots" on the doorstep provide the theme for another clever holiday decorating arrangement.

Naturally, to be most effective,

Ohioan Thinks He Recognizes Refugee Kin

CLEVELAND, Dec. 3 — George F. Traub thinks he found a cousin among a group of war orphans pictured on the front page of a Cleveland newspaper.

The youngsters are touring the United States under the sponsorship of the Foster Parents Plan which operates a home for needy and war-orphaned youngsters near London, England.

Among those pictured when their tour reached Cleveland was Hanka Traub, an 11-year-old girl who was found by liberating Allied forces when they reached Auschwitz prison in Austria.

Officials of the plan said her parents doubtlessly perished at the prison. Then six years old, the little girl spoke some German words and a little Czechoslovakian.

Traub, who owns a department store in suburban Euclid, came here a dozen years ago from Prague, Czechoslovakia.

He says he had a niece, also named Hanka Traub, who reportedly died in the Auschwitz prison. She would have been 26 by now.
